To Save the New Church Carpet from Boing Stained. "Inn't that protty ?"

ladies standing in a newly-fitted and freshly-freecoed church in this city yesterday, and she referred especially to the new earpet with which the floor of the beautiful place f worship is covered.

Every one agreed that it was very pretty.

Every one agreed that it was very pretty, and they were proceeding to express their simination of the whole place generally, when the first speaker said, pointing to a spot in a certain pew, "The color will be entirely obliterated there by Sunday night."

"Why will it." commenced one elderly sister who had been a self-appointed committee of one on the quality of that carpet and who approved the purchase, but she got no further, for a broad smile o'erapread her counterance and she twisted her lips up as though she was going to squirt out a mouthful of tobacco juice.

"That's it," was the rejoinder, and then a reporter who had beard the conversation and witnessed the dumb show requested to be enlightened.

and witnessed the dumb show requested to be enlightened.

The story was not a long one, but it was interesting, because it showed how powerfully habit can control those who are bound in the chains of their own weakness. In that church are several members who are moderate tobacco chewers, and they cannot fight their appetite for even a couple of hours. The result is that the carpet is stained by the juice which they necessarily exude, and the hearts of the laifes are correspondingly saddened.

The reporter was consulted as to what should be done to save the carpet, and he suggested that the ledies might do as their sisters did in an up-town Methodist church. There the evil had been met and overcome by putting a spittoon near the place where

There the evil had been met and overcome by putting a spittoon near the place where the offender sat. To be sure the sexton had to look after it, but it saved him many a pain in the back from attempting to remove the stains in the carpet.

The matrons approved the suggestion, and the regular attendant who profanes the new green carpet with moisture from the "weed" must not allow his feelings to be burt if os the following Sabbath he should find in his pew a red and gold or green and gold tin spittoon.
